REAL-ESTATE TITLES.

Dr. Fleming Thinks the Present Way of Getting Abstract Copies Too Expensive.

He Believes the Information Furnished by the Abstract Companies Should Be Free.

Ridiculous Claims Made in These Suits by Speculative Organizations to Subserve Ends.

[illegible] Fleming, who spoke by consent, said that abstracts of titles were very good and usually fair statements of the facts, but that they were too expensive. He thought that when the law had run long enough to make good records, and convert them into indisputable evidences of title, the abstracts would cease to be necessary. The abstracts from the Recorder's office were the correct ones.

"Your experience," said Dr. [illegible], "in the administration of the estates which have come under my care in the Probate Court, and the certifying of a number of abstracts, has been to the effect that the abstracts furnished by the various companies are not correct. I understand that your person who has the knowledge of making abstracts correctly does not undertake to make abstracts for the public, but only for the companies, and that he is employed by the companies at a salary

In an affidavit, solemnly made before Clerk Hoover and a notary, Joseph Rogers of No. 49 West Randolph-street yesterday swore that he never wrote a letter to Justice Summers that he ever wrote a letter to anybody that a letter that he thought he ought to write, or that he ever authorized any one to write a letter for him, or that he ever had any connection with any letter ever written.

It is said that the release of Mrs. Cunning-ham from active confinement at once was due to the intercession in her behalf of her husband, who, although lacking one to reach the penitentiary of his stock, did sacrifice to see the woman who bears his name enjoy certain comforts that have not been accorded to other Forty-and-eight prisoners.
